

New Regulation on Integration

Courses:

Freedom of Choice Abolished for Integration Course Students

In June, the Federal Ministry of the Interior changed the statutory instrument called 'Integrationskursverordnung', thus transforming the administration of integration courses into a system of compulsory assignment:

- Students will not be able any more to choose which school to go and learn German,
- Students will not be allowed to change the school they are assigned to.

The consequences will be serious:

- How could students have the required motivation to learn the language once freedom of choice is abolished? That will have a disastrous effect on the atmosphere in the German classes.
- The individual profile of the language schools will be erased, they will be treated like satellites of the assignment office.

We cannot leave uncommented this change taking a completely wrong direction. It is high time for protest.

- Raise the issue in your classes!
- Organise yourselves in the classes, move to protest!

German students are not objects of assignment!
